Our history

The ATO began as part of Treasury in 1910.

Last updated 21 May 2015

At the end of the nineteenth century each of the six Australian colonies had their own tax systems, which were almost entirely reliant on customs and excise duties. The design of these tax systems was largely driven by administrative concerns, rather than principles of equity or efficiency.

Australia's earliest national taxes were customs and excise duties, which the states gave up in order to secure interstate free trade and ensure adequate protection for Australian industry. Customs duties were also designed to act as trade barriers between the colonies. One of the significant results of Federation in 1901 was the removal of all duties on goods traded between Australian states.

The Australian Taxation Office has its roots in the Land Tax Act 1910, when a Commissioner of Land Taxation was appointed to administer the legislation and an office under the direction of the Commissioner was created as a branch of Treasury. This office has had several names during its history including Federal Taxation Office, Commonwealth Taxation Office and now the Australian Taxation Office.

All members, advisers, observers and the secretariat are to comply with the CEI and where a conflict of interest (real, perceived or potential) is identified, complete a COI form that will be documented in the ATO Integrity Register.

Re-declaration is required as circumstances change. An opportunity will be provided to state any conflict of interest at the start of each meeting and responses will be recorded in the minutes.

This includes notifying other positions held by members.

Members are responsible for taking an active role in considering the impact that any personal or financial interests may have on the performance of their ATO obligations. This includes considering whether existing commitments or committee memberships may appear to, are likely to, or do in fact influence their performance as a member of the Committee.

Decisions must be made, and be perceived to be made, on proper grounds, for legitimate reasons and without bias. Community and government confidence in the ATO depends on this. In situations where a conflict of interest exists, decisions must be made by another non-conflicted person.

Details of material personal interests declared by the Chair, other Committee members, advisers or observers. Any actions taken, will be appropriately recorded in the outcomes of the minutes.

Audit and Risk Subcommittee

The Committee has established an Audit and Risk Subcommittee (Subcommittee) to assist in meeting its responsibilities. Membership will include all independent members of the Committee.

The Committee stipulates that the Subcommittee:

- will meet each financial year to consider the financial statements and the performance statements
- will be chaired by an independent member on a rotating basis to ensure best practice.

The Tax Practitioners Board and Australian Charities and Not-for-profits Commission

There is no legislative requirement for ACNC and TPB to have separate audit committees. As the accountable authority, the Commissioner must ensure that the ACNC and TPB comply with the PGPA Act.

On a rotating basis, the ATO committee members attend the ACNC and TPB audit and risk committees as observers.

Australian National Audit Office

Representatives of the Australian National Audit Office (ANAO) will be invited to attend meetings of the Committee, as observers. The Committee will meet at least 4 times per year.

Additional special meetings may be held to review the ATO's annual financial statements and performance statements or to meet other specific responsibilities of the Committee as required.
