

Super co-contribution calculator

Tool to help individuals and the self-employed estimate their co-contribution entitlement and eligibility.

Last updated 5 July 2016

The super co-contribution calculator is a tool to help individuals, including the self-employed, estimate their co-contribution entitlement and eligibility, based on information provided about:

- income
- personal super contributions.

Information you need

You must enter the amounts of your:

- personal super contributions
- employment and business income, including partnership distribution
- any reportable fringe benefits amounts
- any reportable employer super contributions
- any other income.

For individuals with business income, you must also enter the amount of business-related deductions.

Next step:

• Use the Super co-contribution calculator

Our commitment to you

We are committed to providing you with accurate, consistent and clear information to help you understand your rights and entitlements and meet your obligations.

If you follow our information and it turns out to be incorrect, or it is misleading and you make a mistake as a result, we will take that into account when determining what action, if any, we should take.

Some of the information on this website applies to a specific financial year. This is clearly marked. Make sure you have the information for the right year before making decisions based on that information.

If you feel that our information does not fully cover your circumstances, or you are unsure how it applies to you, contact us or seek professional advice.
