Taxation Ruling

Income tax: pay as you go withholding – who is an employee?

Except to the extent that the content considers the meaning of employee for the purposes of section 12 of the Superannuation Guarantee (Administration) Act 1992, this Addendum is a public ruling for the purposes of the Taxation Administration Act 1953. It amends Taxation Ruling TR 2023/4 to include guidance in Appendix 2 of the Ruling on when a person is considered to be an 'employee' under section 12 of the Superannuation Guarantee (Administration) Act 1992 (SGAA). Appendix 2 of the Ruling:

- assists the community by confirming the ATO's view in light of developments in case law in the context of the SGAA since SGR 2005/1W Superannuation guarantee: who is an employee? (withdrawn) was last updated
- consolidates the ATO's view in respect of the common law definition of employee contained in SGR 2005/1 (withdrawn) and TR 2023/4
- provides a holistic ATO view of the common law meaning of employee and extended meaning of the word as contained in the SGAA.

TR 2023/4 is amended as follows:

1. Ruling title

Omit the title of the Ruling; substitute 'Income tax and superannuation guarantee: who is an employee?'.

2. Preamble

Omit the wording of the preamble; substitute:

This Ruling (excluding appendixes) is a public ruling for the purposes of the Taxation Administration Act 1953, except to the extent that the Ruling considers the meaning of employee for the purposes of section 12 of the Superannuation Guarantee (Administration) Act 1992.

Subject to that exception, if this Ruling applies to you, and you correctly rely on it, we will apply the law to you in the way set out in this Ruling. That is, you will not pay any more tax or penalties or interest in respect of the matters covered by this Ruling.

To the extent that this Ruling aids in understanding the meaning of 'employee' for the purposes of section 12 of the Superannuation Guarantee (Administration) Act 1992, it is not binding on the Commissioner. However, if the Commissioner later takes the view that section 12 applies less favourably to you than this Ruling indicates, the fact that you acted in accordance with this Ruling would be a relevant factor in your favour in the Commissioner's exercise of any discretion in regard to the imposition of superannuation guarantee penalties.

4. Paragraph 2

After ‘in this Ruling’, insert ‘, except in Appendix 2,’.

5. Paragraph 3

(a) Omit the wording of the paragraph; substitute:

The expressions ‘employee’ and ‘employer’ in the Superannuation Guarantee (Administration) Act 1992 (SGAA) have both their ordinary meaning and an extended meaning. This Ruling aids in understanding both the ordinary and extended meaning of employee for the purposes of section 12 of the SGAA, but it is not able to be binding on the Commissioner on this aspect.^{A1}

(b) At the end of the paragraph, insert new footnote A1:

^{A1} This explanation does not extend to the application of sections 27, 28 and 29 of the SGAA. These sections exclude salary or wages paid to certain employees in certain circumstances for the purposes of calculating the superannuation guarantee charge.

6. Paragraph 4

Omit the wording of the paragraph, excluding footnotes; substitute:

In this Ruling, the sections titled Ruling and Appendix 1 – Explanation deal with the ordinary meaning of employee and do not deal with payments for work and services which are subject to withholding under other provisions, such as payments to directors¹ or office holders², labour hire payments³ and alienated personal services income.⁴ These exclusions do not apply to Appendix 2 – Meaning of employee under section 12 of the SGAA.

7. Paragraph 5

- (a) Omit the wording of the heading; substitute 'Previous Rulings'.
- (b) In the first sentence, omit 'TR 2005/16 Income Tax: Pay'; substitute 'Taxation Ruling TR 2005/16 Income tax: Pay'.
- (c) After paragraph 5, insert new paragraph 5A:

5A. Appendix 2 of this Ruling replaces Superannuation Guarantee Ruling SGR 2005/1 Superannuation guarantee: who is an employee? which has been withdrawn with effect from 26 June 2024. Where the Commissioner's views in that Ruling still apply, they are incorporated into this Ruling.

8. Paragraph 11

In footnote 16, after 'The High Court in Personnel', insert ' Contracting'.

9. Paragraph 14

After paragraph 14, insert new paragraph 14A and signature block, including heading:

Date of effect

14A. This Ruling applies both before and after its date of issue. However, this Ruling will not apply to taxpayers to the extent that it conflicts with the terms of a settlement of a dispute agreed to before the date of issue of this Ruling (see paragraphs 75 to 76 of Taxation Ruling TR 2006/10 Public Rulings).

Commissioner of Taxation
6 December 2023

10. Paragraph 15

- (a) Omit the heading, insert 'Appendix 1 – Explanation'.

(b) After the new heading, insert:

! This Explanation is provided as information to help you understand how the Commissioner's view has been reached. It does not form part of the binding public ruling.

11. Paragraph 42

In the quote, omit 'The right to control'; substitute '... The right to control'.

12. Paragraph 58

In footnote 66, after '[2011] FCA 366', insert ' (On Call)'.

13. Paragraph 59

In footnote 67, after '92 ATC 4327', insert ' (World Book)'.

14. Paragraph 61

In footnote 68, after '[1955] HCA 18', insert ' (Neale)'.

15. Paragraph 63

In footnote 73, omit 'Interpreters and Translators Agency Pty Ltd v Commissioner of Taxation (No 3) [2011] FCA 366 '.

16. Paragraph 64

In footnote 76, omit '125at'; substitute '125 at'.

17. Paragraph 67

- (a) Omit 'bicycle contractors'; substitute 'bicycle couriers'.
- (b) After 'investment in capital', insert ' equipment'.

18. Paragraph 68

After 'important, finding', insert ' (footnotes omitted)'.

19. Paragraph 77

In the second dot point, after 'Australian business number', insert ' (ABN)'.

20. Paragraph 79

In footnote 93, after 'ZG Operations at [99]', insert ' ; EFEX Group Pty Ltd v Bennett [2024] FCAFC 35 at [45–48] and [53]'.

21. Paragraph 80

In footnote 94, after '[2020] FCAFC 118', insert '(Moffet)'.

22. Paragraph 83

- (a) Omit the paragraph, including the heading.
- (b) After paragraph 83, insert new paragraphs 84 to 155 including headings:

Appendix 2 – Meaning of employee under section 12 of the SGAA

ⓘ This Appendix is not legally binding on the Commissioner. However, if the Commissioner later takes the view that the law applies less favourably to you than this Appendix indicates, the fact that you acted in accordance with this Appendix would be a relevant factor in your favour in the Commissioner's exercise of any discretion in regards to the imposition of penalties.

84. Employers are required to make superannuation contributions into a complying superannuation fund or retirement savings account for the benefit of their eligible employees in accordance with minimum prescribed levels. If an employer does not make the required superannuation contributions, they will be subject to the superannuation guarantee charge. No liability for the superannuation guarantee charge will arise if a person is not an employee, or the person is otherwise exempted, under the SGAA.

85. The expressions 'employee' and 'employer' in the SGAA have both their ordinary meaning and an extended meaning.

86. All legislative references in this Appendix are to the SGAA, unless otherwise indicated.

Ordinary meaning

87. Under subsection 12(1), if a person is an employee at common law, that person is an employee under the SGAA.⁹⁶ Paragraphs 18 to 82 of this Ruling explain when a person is an employee at common law.

Extended meaning

88. As stated in paragraph 85 of this Ruling, the classification of a person as an employee for the purposes of the SGAA is not solely dependent upon the existence of a common law employment relationship. While the definition includes persons who at common law would be regarded as employees, subsections 12(2) to (10) list a number of further persons who are also treated as employees – for instance, a person who would be considered an independent contractor under the common law but may be treated as an employee under subsection 12(3). These subsections deem persons who fall within them to be employees for the purposes of the SGAA, even if they are not common law employees.

89. These deemed employees for superannuation purposes are:

- a person who is entitled to payment for the performance of duties as a member of an executive body of a body corporate (subsection 12(2))

- a person who works under a contract that is wholly or principally for the labour of the person (subsection 12(3))
- members of the Commonwealth and State Parliament, members of the Australian Capital Territory (ACT) Legislative Assembly and members of the Northern Territory (NT) Legislative Assembly (subsections 12(4) to (7))
- a person who is paid to perform or present, or to participate in the performance or presentation of, any music, play, dance, entertainment, sport, display or promotional activity or any similar activity involving the exercise of intellectual, artistic, musical, physical or other personal skills (paragraph 12(8)(a))
- a person who is paid to provide services in connection with any music, play, dance, entertainment, sport, display or promotional activity or any similar activity involving the exercise of intellectual, artistic, musical, physical or other personal skills (paragraph 12(8)(b))
- a person who is paid to perform services in, or in connection with, the making of any film, tape or disc or of any television or radio broadcast (paragraph 12(8)(c))
- a person who holds, or performs the duties of, an appointment, office or position under the Constitution or under the law of the Commonwealth, or of a State or Territory (paragraph 12(9)(a))
- a person who is otherwise in the service of the Commonwealth, of a State or of a Territory, including service as a member of the Defence Force or as a member of the police force (paragraph 12(9)(b))
- a person who is a member of an eligible local governing body (subsection 12(10)).⁹⁷

90. The following paragraphs consider each of these categories of deemed employees under the SGAA.

Members of executive bodies of bodies corporate – subsection 12(2)

91. Under subsection 12(2), a person who is entitled to payment for the performance of duties as a member of an executive body (whether described as the board of directors or otherwise) of a body corporate⁹⁸ is, in relation to those duties, an employee of the body corporate for superannuation purposes.

92. In the majority of circumstances, such a person will be called a ‘director’. The SGAA will apply even if the person is not referred to as a director but falls within the terms of subsection 12(2).

Contracts for the labour of the person – subsection 12(3)

93. Under subsection 12(3), a person who works under a contract that is wholly or principally for their labour, will be an employee of the other party to the contract.

94. As expressed by the Full Federal Court in Moffet, for subsection 12(3) to apply, 3 elements must be satisfied:

- firstly, there must be a contract
- secondly, the contract must be wholly or principally 'for' the labour of a person, and
- thirdly, the person must 'work' under that contract.⁹⁹

95. These elements are considered in detail in paragraphs 96 to 111 of this Ruling. The first and third elements are discussed first, as they are contextually intertwined.

Is there a contract?

96. This first element of subsection 12(3) (that is, that there is a contract), requires¹⁰⁰:

... a bilateral exchange of promises of labour and payment between two sides of the contract. On one side of the contract, a promise to provide labour and on the other side of the contract, a promise to make payment.

97. A contract can be bilateral even though there are more than 2 parties to the contract.¹⁰¹ The superannuation regime cannot be circumvented by the simple device of forming a contract which names more than 2 parties.¹⁰²

98. Subsection 12(3) requires attention to the rights under the contract and not to the actual performance of the contract.¹⁰³

Does the person work under the contract?

99. The concept of 'works under a contract' is one of personal exertion and personal effort.¹⁰⁴

100. Subsection 12(3) only applies where the party providing the labour (that is, the worker) is a natural person who was a party to the contract in his or her individual capacity and not in any other capacity such as a trustee of a personal services trust or a partner in a partnership.¹⁰⁵ Subsection 72(1) does not operate to deem a partnership or other entity to be a natural person for the purposes of being treated as an employee under subsection 12(3).¹⁰⁶

Is the contract wholly or principally 'for' the labour of the person?

101. Whether the contract is wholly or principally 'for' the labour of a person, is to be assessed from the perspective of the engaging entity¹⁰⁷ and is to be determined by reference to the terms of the contract.¹⁰⁸ In this context:

- the word 'principally' assumes its commonly understood meaning, that is, 'chiefly' or 'mainly'¹⁰⁹, and
- 'labour' includes mental and artistic effort as well as physical toil.¹¹⁰

102. A contract is not wholly or principally for the labour of a person where:

- the contract leaves the worker free to do the work themselves or to employ another person to carry it out (that is, the contract contains a right to delegate, subcontract or assign the work)¹¹¹, or

- the contract is for the provision or production of a result and the worker is paid for that result¹¹² (that is, results contracts), or
- the contract is principally for a benefit other than the labour of the worker (for example, the contract is principally for the provision of equipment).¹¹³

Right to delegate, subcontract and assign the work

103. A contract will not be wholly or principally for the labour of a worker, where that contract contains a right which allows the worker to delegate, subcontract or assign their work to another, whether subject to the consent of the engaging entity or not.¹¹⁴ Such a right to delegate, subcontract or assign work is discussed in paragraphs 54 to 58 of this Ruling.

104. It is the existence of the right to delegate, subcontract or assign the work which is relevant to the application of subsection 12(3), and not the exercise of that right.¹¹⁵

105. Where a contract contains a right to delegate, subcontract or assign the work of a worker, the worker will not fall within the extended definition of employee under subsection 12(3). This position is subject to the contractual right to delegate, subcontract or assign the work not being challenged as being a sham, limited in scope or legally incapable of exercise.¹¹⁶

'Results' contracts

106. A contract will not be wholly or principally for the labour of a worker where the contract is properly characterised as being for the provision of a result.¹¹⁷ That is, the essence of the contract must be to achieve a specified result and not to do work. Where the contract is genuinely for the provision of a result, the worker will not fall within the extended definition of 'employee' under subsection 12(3).

107. The characteristics of a contract for a result are discussed in paragraphs 59 to 65 of this Ruling.

Is the contract principally for a benefit other than the labour of the worker?

108. To the extent that a contract is partly for labour and partly for something else, for example, the hire of plant or machinery, whether the contract is principally for the worker's labour will be a question of fact. This involves an evaluation of the terms of the relevant contract or contracts¹¹⁸, and is assessed by reference to the benefit or benefits that the engaging entity receives out of the bargain.¹¹⁹

109. Where the provision of the contracted service requires the use of a substantial capital asset, this is a factor supporting the characterisation of the contract as not being wholly or principally for labour.¹²⁰

110. In certain cases, where a contract is properly characterised, it may be that the benefit received by the engaging entity under the contract is a single integrated benefit, of which labour is just one component, rather than a number of separate benefits.¹²¹ For example, in ZG Operations Remittal, Perram and Anderson JJ held that the benefit the engaging entity, ZG Operations, received under the contract was a single integrated benefit being a delivery service, and not separate benefits of driving labour and the use of a truck.¹²²

111. Regardless of whether a contract is for several discrete benefits or one integrated benefit of which labour is just one component, to determine whether labour is the principal benefit or component contracted for, a quantitative valuation, or where appropriate a qualitative analysis, must be undertaken. This will require the use of available evidence. For example, in ZG Operations Remittal, a quantitative valuation was regarded by the Full Federal Court as required if the workers in that case were to establish that they fell within the scope of subsection 12(3), on the basis that the contracts were at least principally for their labour. Perram and Anderson JJ further commented on the type of evidence that would be relevant to such an analysis which included the market value of hiring similar trucks on similarly favourable terms and the market cost of the labour involved in providing the delivery services during the relevant period.¹²³

Arrangements involving labour hire firms

112. In a labour hire arrangement, where the arrangement does not fall within subsection 12(1), but the elements of subsection 12(3) are satisfied, the relevant worker will be an employee of the labour hire firm and not the third party to whom they provide their labour. This is because the worker is working under the contract between the worker and the labour hire firm, and not under the contract between the labour hire firm and the third party.¹²⁴

113. Further, it is considered that a contract between a labour hire firm and a worker is not properly characterised as a contract for a result. In a labour hire arrangement, the contract between the labour hire firm and the worker, in substance, requires the particular worker to provide some services for the benefit of a third party. The particular worker does not undertake to produce a given result; rather, the particular worker undertakes to perform some work for a client of the labour hire firm.¹²⁵ The worker is thus an employee of the labour hire firm under subsection 12(3).

114. The nature of labour hire arrangements under both subsection 12(1) and under subsection 12(3) are discussed in greater detail in Superannuation Guarantee Ruling SGR 2005/2 Superannuation guarantee: work arranged by intermediaries.

Members of Commonwealth and State Parliament, members of ACT Legislative Assembly and members of NT Legislative Assembly – subsections 12(4) to (7)

115. Members of the Commonwealth House of Representatives and of the Senate, members of State Legislative Assemblies and Legislative Councils and members of the NT and ACT Legislative Assemblies are not common law employees because they have no identifiable employer.¹²⁶ None of the usual indicators of an employer or employee relationship, such as an express or implied contract of employment or an ability to direct activities or exercise control over the employee, apply to members.

116. However, the members in question are specifically incorporated into the definition of employee in the SGAA by virtue of subsections 12(4) to 12(7).

Entertainers, artists, musicians, sports persons et cetera – subsection 12(8)

117. Approaching subsection 12(8) on a textual basis, the tests contained in paragraphs 12(8)(a) to (c) must be applied on a payment-by-payment basis. This is because the character of the payments received by the relevant person will be determinative of whether that person will be treated as an employee of the payer under subsection 12(8). In determining the character of the relevant payment, reference must be made to the substance of the arrangement, and not merely by reference to what the parties have agreed to label the payment.

118. Identifying the relevant payment to which the tests in subsection 12(8) must be applied will often be straightforward. Each payment should be examined separately to determine the character of that payment.

119. Subsection 12(8) is not limited in the way that subsection 12(3) is limited to contracts wholly or principally for a person's labour. However, it is necessary that the particular person is actually paid to provide, perform or present services rather than for some other purpose. For example, a person engaged to write a script is performing services but one who sells existing scripts is not – they are merely selling property.

120. If a person is an employee by virtue of subsection 12(8) applying, then the person liable to make the payment is their employer for the purposes of the SGAA.¹²⁷

121. Superannuation Guarantee Ruling SGR 2009/1 Superannuation guarantee: payments made to sportspersons provides further insight into the Commissioner's interpretation and application of the extended definition of employee contained in subsection 12(8) as it applies to sportspersons.

Payments for participation or performance – paragraph 12(8)(a)

122. Under paragraph 12(8)(a), an entertainer, artist, musician, sportsperson et cetera. who is paid to perform, present or to participate in the performance or presentation of any music, play, dance, entertainment, sport, display or promotional activity or any similar activity involving the exercise of intellectual, artistic, musical, physical or other personal skills is an employee under the SGAA of the person liable to make the payment.

123. One clear limitation on the extended meaning of employee in paragraph 12(8)(a) is that the relevant person is required to actively participate in the performance or presentation. This is implicit in the statement that a person is 'paid to perform ... or to participate in' the performance of that activity.¹²⁸ A painter, for instance, does not perform or present a painting exhibition. They merely produce the works used in the exhibition. Therefore, even though the products of their work can form part of, for example, a display, individuals who produce paintings or photographic displays do not usually come within the scope of paragraph 12(8)(a).

124. For the purposes of paragraph 12(8)(a), the word 'entertainment' has been given a broad definition. Specifically, Senior Member O'Loughlin in General Aviation, in finding that skydiving was a form of entertainment, stated¹²⁹:

125. Further, that the word 'similar' is used in paragraph 12(8)(a) shows that 'activity' is limited to things of a like kind. Similar activities include those activities which derive their artistic or sporting content from the performance or presentation.

126. A payment, or part thereof, made to a person must be directly referable to that individual's performance or participation in the relevant activity for paragraph 12(8)(a) to apply. The requirement to establish this causal link is implicit in the use of the word 'to', as in 'paid to perform'. 'Performance' in this context refers to the execution of the physical or personal skills of the person and does not focus on the level of success achieved (if this is relevant to the specific activity).

Payments for services provided in connection with an activity referred to in paragraph 12(8)(a) – paragraph 12(8)(b)

127. The scope of subsection 12(8) is further extended by paragraph 12(8)(b). This paragraph states a person who is paid to provide services in connection with an activity referred to in paragraph 12(8)(a) is an employee of the person liable to make the payment.

128. Paragraph 12(8)(b) does not require a person to actively participate in a performance, presentation, or other activity described within paragraph 12(8)(a) to be defined as an employee; rather, the paragraph specifies that the person will be an employee if they provide a service in connection with the activity.

Payments for services provided in, or in connection with, the making of any film, tape or disc or of any television or radio broadcast – paragraph 12(8)(c)

129. A person who is paid to perform services in, or in connection with, the making of any film, tape or disc or of any television or radio broadcast is an employee of the person liable to make the payment under paragraph 12(8)(c). The terms of paragraph 12(8)(c) do not require the person to perform in such a broadcast using their physical or personal skills.

In connection with – paragraph 12(8)(b) and paragraph 12(8)(c)

130. The words 'in connection with' do not have a specific technical meaning and should take on their ordinary meaning having regard to the context in which they appear. The term 'in connection with' has been considered by the courts in the context of the income tax legislation and as far as those cases discuss the ordinary meaning of the term those cases are useful references for the purposes of the SGAA. A summary of the relevant case law was undertaken by Wilcox J in Our Town FM Pty Ltd v Australian Broadcasting Tribunal & Anor. This statement was upheld on appeal (emphasis added)¹³⁰:

The words "in connection with"... do not necessarily require a causal relationship between the two things: see Commissioner for Superannuation v Miller (1985) 8 FCR 153 at 154, 160, 163. They may be used to describe a relationship with a contemplated future event: see Koppen v. Commissioner for Community Relations (1986) 11 FCR 360 at 364 and Johnson v. Johnson [1952] P 47 at pp.50-51. In the latter case the United Kingdom Court of Appeal applied a decision of the British Columbia Court of Appeal, In re Nanaimo Community Hotel Limited [1945] 3 DLR 225, in which the question was whether a particular court, which was given "jurisdiction to hear and determine all questions that may arise in connection with any assessment made under this Act", had jurisdiction to deal with a matter which preceded the issue of an assessment. The trial judge held that it did, that the phrase “in connection with” covered matters leading up to, or which might lead up to, an assessment. He said, at [at 639]:

“One of the very generally accepted meanings of 'connection' is 'relation between things one of which is bound up with or involved in another'; or, again 'having to do with.' The words include matters occurring prior to as well as subsequent to or consequent upon so long as they are related to the principal thing. The phrase 'having to do with' perhaps gives as good a suggestion of the meaning as could be had.”

131. As can be seen from the statement in paragraph 130 of this Ruling, the term ‘in connection with’ can be given a relatively wide meaning, depending on the context in which that term appears. However, having regard to the context in which the term appears in the SGAA, ‘in connection with’ requires that the services a person provides or performs must relate directly to the relevant activity in question.¹³¹ Services provided or performed before or after the relevant activity occurs may fall within the scope of paragraphs 12(8)(b) or (c) as long as the services are ‘bound up or involved in’ that activity. That is, the use of the term ‘in connection with’ in paragraphs 12(8)(b) and (c) is intended to cover persons providing the ‘behind the scenes’ services which enable the relevant activity to occur. For example, a technician engaged to control the sound quality for a concert is not an active participant in any performance. Even though the technician is not within paragraph 12(8)(a), they are still an employee because they are paid for services in connection with a musical performance.

A person who holds, or performs the duties of, an appointment, office or position under the Constitution or under a law of the Commonwealth, of a State or of a Territory – subsection 12(9)

132. A person who holds, or performs the duties of, an appointment, office or position under the Constitution or under a law of the Commonwealth, of a State or of a Territory is an employee by virtue of paragraph 12(9)(a). Similarly, a person who is otherwise in the service of the Commonwealth, a State or a Territory, including service as a member of the Defence Force or as a member of the police force, is an employee of the Commonwealth, State or the Territory, as the case requires under paragraph 12(9)(b).

133. The wording in subsection 12(9) is very similar to the wording contained in paragraphs 12-45(1)(b), (c), and (d) of Schedule 1 to the TAA. Taxation Ruling TR 2002/21 Income tax: Pay As You Go (PAYG) Withholding from salary, wages, commissions, bonuses, or allowances paid to office holders provides comprehensive guidance on the interpretation of the wording contained in those paragraphs. A similar interpretation applies for the purposes of interpreting subsection 12(9).

Members of an eligible local governing body – subsection 12(10)

134. Subject to subsection 12(10), a person who holds office as a member of a local government council is not an employee of the council.

135. Under subsection 12(10), a person who is covered by paragraph 12-45(1)(e) of Schedule 1 to the TAA is an employee for the purposes of the SGAA. Paragraph 12-45(1)(e) of Schedule 1 to the TAA is about members of local governing bodies that are subject to PAYG withholding. A local governing body is a body that made a resolution which, in effect, brought the remuneration of its members into the PAYG system. The effect of subsection 12(10) is to also bring those members into the superannuation guarantee system.

Work of a domestic or private nature – subsection 12(11)

136. Unlike subsections 12(2) to (10) which extend the meaning of employee and employer, subsection 12(11) narrows the concept and provides that a person who is paid to do work wholly or principally of a domestic or private nature for 30 hours or less per week is not an employee in relation to that work.

137. The words 'domestic' and 'private' are not defined in the SGAA, as such it is their ordinary meaning which is relevant to an application of subsection 12(11). To this end, the Macquarie Dictionary defines 'domestic' to mean 'of or relating to the home, the household or household affairs' and 'private' to mean 'belonging to oneself', 'being one's own', 'individual or personal'.¹³²

138. Examples of work of a domestic or private nature include cooking, cleaning, shopping, assisting with shopping, showering, dressing and general household duties.¹³³ The Commissioner is also of the view that the minding of children, the making of repairs or maintenance on a home, or to tend to a residential garden could also be work of a domestic or private nature.

139. In Newton, the Full Court held that the phrase 'work ... of a domestic or private nature' for the purposes of subsection 12(11) is a composite one.¹³⁴ That is, work will not be of a private or domestic nature for the purposes of subsection 12(11) solely by reference to the work that the person performs.¹³⁵ Rather, the exemption is only for the benefit of a householder for whom the relevant work is done.¹³⁶

140. Therefore, subsection 12(11) only applies where there is a direct arrangement between the householder making the payment and the person carrying out the work of a domestic or private nature.¹³⁷

141. As such, the exemption under subsection 12(11) is not available to a business (that is, a school, hotel, hospital, labour hire firm et cetera) who pays a worker to do work of a domestic nature, so far as the end-user or client is concerned. For example, while some work done in a school, hotel, hospital or in a retirement village might be characterised as domestic, it cannot be characterised as being of a domestic or private nature, in the context of the SGAA.¹³⁸ Whether a person carrying out such work is, however, an employee for superannuation purposes will depend on whether they fall within the other subsections of section 12.¹³⁹

Employment-like setting

142. In determining if a person is an employee under subsections 12(2) to (10) consideration of whether the personal services provided were done so in an employment-like setting will not be relevant.

143. This employment-like setting concept originates from Bromberg J in On Call where in considering subsections 12(2) to (10), His Honour introduced the concept, commenting in obiter, that subsections 12(2) to (10) were intended to cover¹⁴⁰:

... persons who may not be common law employees but who earn remuneration in exchange for the provision of personal services in the context of an employment likesetting.

144. His Honour went on to state:

... [w]hether an employment-like setting exists may be best answered by asking: Whether, in all the circumstances, the labour component of the contract in question could have been provided by the recipient of the labour employing an employee?

145. Perram and Anderson JJ in Moffet, however, found that Bromberg J's comments above had no textual anchor to section 12 and constituted a gloss on the provision.¹⁴¹ Such that subsections 12(2) to (10) are not limited to instances where a person provides personal services in what appears to be an employment-like setting, which is not of a domestic or private nature.

Partnerships

146. A partner in a partnership cannot be an employee of the partnership. It is not possible for a person to meet the common law definition of employee and still have the powers and responsibilities of a partner. In particular, the degree of control over an individual required for the individual to be an employee at common law is incompatible with the degree of independence that a partner has in relation to the conduct of the partnership enterprise.

147. Agreements that allow a partner to draw a 'salary' against the partnership do not create an employment relationship but are rather agreements to vary the sharing of partnership profits between the partners.¹⁴²

148. If a partnership has contracted to provide services, then the person who actually does the work is not the employee of the other party to the contract. This is so even if the person is a partner and even if the contract requires the partner to do the work.¹⁴³ However, if partners contract outside the partnership in their own personal capacity to provide their labour to fulfil a contractual obligation, they can be employees of the other party to the contract.

149. At common law, a partnership (except an incorporated limited partnership)¹⁴⁴ is not a legal entity separate and distinct from its members.¹⁴⁵ The views in paragraphs 146 to 148 of this Ruling are not affected by subsection 72(1), which deems a partnership to be a separate legal entity for the purposes of the SGAA.

150. An individual other than a partner engaged by the partnership to perform work for the partnership may be an employee of the partnership, depending on the circumstances of the contractual arrangement.

Personal services income measures

151. Part 2-42 of the Income Tax Assessment Act 1997 (ITAA 1997) contains the alienation measures that set out the income tax treatment of the ordinary or statutory income of an individual or personal services entity that is an individual's personal services income (PSI). Income will constitute PSI if the income is mainly a reward for an individual's personal efforts or skills.¹⁴⁶ The alienation measures will not apply where the income is derived in the course of conducting a personal services business.¹⁴⁷

152. It is recognised that there is some overlap between the tests used to determine whether a personal services business exists, particularly between the 'results test'¹⁴⁸ and subsection 12(3). However, section 84-10 of the ITAA 1997 ensures that the application of the alienation measures to an individual does not make the individual an employee for the purposes of the SGAA.¹⁴⁹ Whether or not an individual is subject to the PSI measures is distinct from and separate to the determination of whether that individual is an employee within the meaning of section 12.

Lease or bailment

153. Paragraphs 81 and 82 of this Ruling in respect of lease or bailment apply equally to section 12.

The interaction of the A New Tax System (Australian Business Number) Act 1999 and the SGAA

154. Section 8 of the A New Tax System (Australian Business Number) Act 1999 provides in part that an entity is entitled to an ABN if they carry on an enterprise in Australia. An enterprise includes activities done in the form of a business but does not include activities done by a person as an employee.¹⁵⁰

155. A person with an ABN may undertake a contractual engagement which is a contract for services and be an employee for SGAA purposes. This is because the scope of the SGAA is extended beyond common law employees.¹⁵¹ For example, a person who has an ABN may be an employee under subsection 12(3) if they have been contracted wholly or principally for their labour.
