11. Paragraph 12

Omit the paragraph; substitute:

'12. The content in a Guideline is usually prepared contemporaneously with the development of the policy and the drafting of the Bill and Explanatory Memorandum. Throughout the legislative process, the ATO typically consults with Treasury and industry, and often this continues after introduction. In this way, a Guideline will often represent the considered views of the Commissioner, informed by a reasonable understanding of the intended policy and the compliance realities facing taxpayers at the very time that the law itself is shaped.'

'(see Date of Effect from paragraph 35 of this Guideline).'

'23. Ordinarily, a Guideline can be expected to be finalised in a manner consistent with the draft upon the new law coming into force. Example 5

34A The Commissioner publishes a Guideline on a new law that creates a deduction. It is clear on reading the Guideline as a whole that the Commissioner's view is that Veronica is not entitled to the deduction. However, Veronica relies on a single sentence in the Guideline to support her claim for a deduction. Reliance on a single sentence in isolation is not relying on the Guideline in good faith and Veronica is not protected.

^{2A} Refer also to paragraphs 6 to 8 of TR 2006/10, which discuss the concept of 'good faith' in the context of a public ruling.
