 This cover sheet is provided for information only. It does not form part of PS LA 2008/4 - Publication of edited versions of written binding advice

 This document has changed over time. This version was published on 22 May 2025

This Law Administration Practice Statement provides guidance on preparing and publishing edited versions of written binding advice.

This Practice Statement is an internal ATO document and an instruction to ATO staff.

1. What this Practice Statement is about

This Practice Statement sets out the policy in relation to preparing and publishing an edited version (EV) of written binding advice.

To improve the integrity of our advice processes, we publish EVs of all written binding advice.

The forms of written binding advice for which EVs are published are:

- private rulings issued under Division 359 of Schedule 1 to the Taxation Administration Act 1953
- administratively binding advice issued to specific taxpayers.

We publish EVs of written binding advice internally on ATOlaw (link available internally only) and externally on the Legal database.

All legislative references in this Practice Statement (including in Attachment A) are to Schedule 1 of the Taxation Administration Act 1953, unless otherwise indicated.

2. Taxpayer reliance on edited versions

Taxpayers cannot rely on EVs. EVs provide a public historical record of edited written binding advice we issue.<sup>1</sup>

We are not bound by an EV in relation to any taxpayer. Importantly, an EV:

- is not intended to provide taxpayers with advice or guidance
- is not a publication approved in writing by the Commissioner
- does not set out a general administrative practice of the ATO.

Therefore, a taxpayer who relies on information contained in an EV which is incorrect or misleading is not protected from<sup>2</sup>:

- tax that would otherwise be payable or repaying an otherwise overpaid entitlement
- interest
- penalties.

It is only the written binding advice that is provided to the taxpayer (from which the EV is created) that is binding on us, and only in relation to the taxpayer to whom it applies.

3. The roles in the edited version process

Case officers and authorising officers

When preparing an EV, case officers and authorising officers must ensure that:

- The relevant precedential ATO view is correctly applied or created when the written binding advice is prepared and that it is technically correct.
- The requirements of Chief Executive Instruction Privacy, taxpayer and registry confidentiality (Privacy CEI) (link available internally only), which include legislative obligations, are met in regard to the EV editing process. This will be achieved if the steps outlined in Attachment A to this Practice Statement, are followed.
- The ATO style guide and the ATO standards for citations and references are applied when drafting the EV (links available internally only).

The authorising officer has ultimate responsibility for the quality of the EV issued to the taxpayer.

Publishing officers

Staff in the Law Publishing team (in the Office of the Chief Tax Counsel business line) publish EVs to ATOlaw and the Legal database. During the publishing

<sup>1</sup> EVs have been published in response to applications received after 31 March 2001 or, in respect of GST-specific private rulings, 30 June 2001. However, EVs over 15 years old are routinely removed from the Legal database.

process, publishing officers undertake a final review of EV content as issued to the taxpayer to ensure that the requirements of the Privacy CEI have been met and the steps in Attachment A to this Practice Statement followed.

Law Publishing is also responsible for resolving comments received on an EV following its issue to a taxpayer (see section 6 of this Practice Statement).

4. What needs to be taken into account when creating an edited version

The overall objective of the editing process is to prepare a version of the written binding advice that accurately reflects that advice and is suitable for publication.

Taxation laws, primarily Division 355, impose confidentiality obligations on ATO staff. Further, obligations to protect the privacy of individuals are imposed by the Privacy Act 1988 (Privacy Act). Case officers must take particular care when preparing an EV to ensure there is no unauthorised disclosure of taxpayer information or interference with the privacy of an individual caused by the disclosure of personal information.

The case officer must consider all submissions about EV content made by the taxpayer on privacy or confidentiality grounds at the time of their request for written binding advice. The case officer must document the reasons for not agreeing with any of the taxpayer's submissions.

Any officer involved in creating or reviewing an EV must follow the 3-step editing process outlined in Attachment A to this Practice Statement. Examples illustrating the editing process can be found in Attachment B to this Practice Statement.

5. Summary edited versions and when they are used

In exceptional cases, it may not be possible to accurately reflect the facts underlying the advice without identifying the parties or breaching confidentiality. A summary of the advice in general terms (referred to as a 'summary EV') must be prepared in these instances. Summary EVs are comprised only of the advice's questions and answers or, in rare cases, a brief statement (such as 'the Commissioner has ruled on each of the questions'). Privacy or commercial-in-confidence issues are the only reasons for the preparation of a summary EV.

6. Process for comments and review

The case officer must send the authorised EV to the taxpayer for comment at the same time the written binding advice is issued.

If the taxpayer does not provide comments about the EV within 28 days from the issue date of the written binding advice, the EV will undergo the publishing process.

If the taxpayer does provide comments relating to privacy or confidentiality matters within 28 days or at any time prior to publication, these comments will be considered by a publishing officer, who may liaise with the case and authorising officers when resolving the issues raised by a taxpayer.

7. Updating edited versions

Documents published to ATOlaw and the Legal database are intended to be a public historical record only. They are not updated to reflect changes in:

- the law, or
- our application of the law.

However, an EV should be annotated where the:

- underlying written binding advice is revised
- original written binding advice is overturned during review processes, or
- EV is found to be incorrect or misleading in regard to application of law and presents a risk in regard to incorrect use.

EVs are not annotated if the reason for it being incorrect is due to a change of legislation, or where we have publicly changed our application of the law on a prospective basis.

A decision to annotate an EV on the basis of it being incorrect or misleading must be approved by an Executive Level 2 staff member or above.

8. More information

This Practice Statement should be read in conjunction with Law Administration Practice Statement PS LA 2008/3 Provision of advice and guidance by the ATO.

ATTACHMENT A – EDITING PROCESS

This Attachment outlines the considerations you should follow when preparing an EV, including the relevant legislation and the 3-step process to follow when editing.

1. Requirements when editing written binding advice

The overall objective of the editing process is to prepare a version of the written binding advice that accurately reflects that advice and is suitable for publishing. Ensuring it is suitable for publishing means that an EV:

- meets the confidentiality requirements in Division 355 and does not disclose ‘protected information’
- meets the requirements of the Privacy Act in relation to the handling of ‘personal information’
- does not disclose any information provided on a commercial-in-confidence basis.

Confidentiality requirements

Division 355 imposes strict prohibitions on ATO staff in regard to the disclosure of protected information.

Protected information<sup>3</sup> is information that:

- (a) was disclosed or obtained under or for the purposes of a law that was a taxation law (other than the Tax Agent Services Act 2009) when the information was disclosed or obtained; and
- (b) relates to the affairs of an entity; and
- (c) identifies, or is reasonably capable of being used to identify, the entity.

Much of the information contained within written binding advice will fall within these categories and will therefore be considered protected information.

Additionally, some of the information we obtain when providing written binding advice has been shared with us on a ‘commercial-in-confidence’ basis. Even if it is not protected information, we are obligated not to disclose commercial-in-confidence information without the consent of the person providing that information.

Requirements of the Privacy Act

The Privacy Act protects the privacy of individuals and regulates how personal information is handled.

Section 6(1) of the Privacy Act defines ‘personal information’ as:

... information or an opinion about an identified individual, or an individual who is reasonably identifiable:

- (a) whether the information or opinion is true or not; and
- (b) whether the information or opinion is recorded in a material form or not.

Thirteen Australian Privacy Principles (APP) are set out in the clauses of Schedule 1 to the Privacy Act, of which the following directly apply to the EV process:

- APP 1 – Open and transparent management of personal information
- APP 11 – Security of personal information.

More information about privacy and how the APPs should be applied can be found at Australian Privacy Principles and in the Office of the Australian Information Commissioner’s Australian Privacy Principles guidelines.<sup>4</sup>

2. Approach to the editing process

Case officers must follow a 3-step approach in performing the editing process. These steps will ensure that the requirements referred to in section 1 of this Attachment are met.

Remember that overall, we are generally seeking to protect and keep confidential the information of any taxpayer or third party in this process – not just the primary applicant.

However, there may be instances where the identity of third parties or the nature of transactions has been so widely publicised and advertised that the removal of all the information which might identify those third parties serves no useful purpose and may hinder the meaning of the EV.

Examples of the sort of information relating to third parties (not the taxpayer) that may be published include the following (this list is not exhaustive):

- the names or transactions of public companies where the information has been disclosed in
  - a prospectus
  - an annual report
  - a media release or press conference
  - a report to a stock exchange (for example, information concerning mergers or acquisitions, share buybacks, share splits)
- the names and products of third parties that provide goods or services to significant numbers of the public (sufficient that the naming of the third party or their products could not identify the taxpayer), for example,
  - universities and other places of education
  - clubs and associations with large memberships
  - statutory authorities, such as councils and public utilities
- information which has been previously published in a publicly available ATO document, such as a public ruling, media release or taxpayer alert
- where the goods or services provided by a third party are advertised to the public and the client base is potentially large. In this case, the transaction or arrangement must be one that is very common and used by, or available to, large numbers of people or organisations.

Examples of the editing process are contained in Attachment B to this Practice Statement and you can contact Law Publishing for further assistance if needed.

Step 1 – remove information that directly identifies the taxpayer or a third party

This step requires case officers to ensure that an EV does not contain any details which may directly identify the taxpayer or other entities involved.

Common examples of such details include:

- name (of individuals, companies and other entities)
- address
- tax file number
- Australian business number
- contact details (for example, phone numbers, email addresses and websites)
- date of birth
- employee identification numbers (for example, Australian Government Service numbers)
- identification and reference numbers (for example, court reference details)
- account numbers with financial institutions (for example, credit cards and bank account details)
- licence numbers (for example, driver's licence and firearm's licence numbers)
- Medicare number
- signature.

Step 2 – remove or replace information that may allow the taxpayer or a third party to be identified

Where the advice includes details that may otherwise reveal a taxpayer or third party's identity, these details must be replaced with more general terms. The EV must remain comprehensible and must still accurately reflect the written binding advice. You must not replace any details with false statements.

Noting the exception for publicly available third-party information, other information which, when combined with other facts, may potentially identify taxpayers should also be removed or replaced with sanitised or generalised information. The following are examples:

- gender (for example, consider using 'they' or 'their' in place of 'she' or 'him')
- words denoting relationships (for example, consider using gender-neutral words like 'spouse', 'sibling' and 'relative')
- quotes and extracts (including clause, condition, section and paragraph numbers) of contracts, constitutions and other taxpayer or related entity documents that are not in the public domain
- titles or positions of persons, such as director, public officer or doctor
- precise monetary amounts and foreign currencies
- geographic locations (for example, it may be acceptable to leave a reference to a large city like Sydney or Melbourne in an EV, however, it may be prudent to remove the name of a rural town, like Cocklebidy WA or Middleton Qld, which have much smaller populations)
- jurisdiction-specific legislation or treaties
- specific descriptions of work or business activity
- relationships and associates
- political associations
- types and descriptions of assets, products and projects
- matters considered by committees
- medical conditions and treatments
- membership of professional and other bodies
- foreign or domestic government agencies
- industry-specific terms or details (for example, stating that the taxpayer purchased an aircraft for commercial use greatly limits the number of entities that could be the taxpayer)
- dates critical to the scheme being ruled upon
- commentary or opinion about a person
- information about income-producing activities which may carry a social stigma.

Case officers should also, as a rule, remove personal information, including details about:

- the adoption of a child
- a divorce
- political associations
- taxpayers engaged in income-producing activities which may carry a social stigma.

Step 3 – remove or replace commercial-in-confidence information

This step requires you to remove or replace any information which has been supplied on a commercial-in-confidence basis (even though it may not identify the taxpayer or any third party).

Confidential information is information which has:

- the necessary quality of confidence

- been given in circumstances where the ATO knew or should have known that it was confidential.

Information that is within the public domain cannot be confidential in nature.

Information possessing a commercial value may include a trade secret (for example, a formula used in a business operation or other information concerning aspects of a business) which may provide an advantage over competitors. The presence of information having a commercial value may be indicated by the extent to which a person guards the confidentiality of the information, the value that the person or competitors place on the information and the investment undertaken to develop the information.

We can only publish confidential information with the consent of the taxpayer who provided that information. If we publish confidential information without consent, there may be legal consequences. Further, if commercial-in-confidence information is also protected information under section 355-30, a tax officer will make an unlawful disclosure of protected information in contravention of section 355-25, even if the taxpayer has consented to the publication of the information – see section 355-35. The effect of this is that a taxpayer cannot consent to the disclosure of their protected information.

The tax effectiveness of arrangements will not, of itself, be accepted as providing a basis for a claim of confidentiality.<sup>5</sup> Such arrangements can be described in the EV and must still be edited in accordance with the other requirements outlined in Steps 1 and 2 of this Attachment to protect the identity of the taxpayers and third parties.

ATTACHMENT B – EXAMPLES

The examples in this Attachment provide guidance in editing written binding advice to remove or replace information that may enable the identification of a taxpayer.

Example 1 – clauses of a contract

If it is necessary to quote specific clauses of an agreement or contract in a private ruling, omit or paraphrase such clauses in the EV. Instead of including:

Clause 3.4 of ABC's Enterprise Agreement sets out ...,

the following is more appropriate and in line with our privacy and confidentiality requirements:

You have provided relevant clauses of your agreement which detail the obligations of the parties.

Example 2 – description of work and claim

Where you are issuing a private ruling to a prominent rugby league player seeking advice on the deductibility of protective head gear, you could describe this as:

You are a professional sportsperson. You wish to claim a deduction for the value of sporting equipment.

Example 3 – business activity, geographic location

Where you are issuing a private ruling to a company providing engineering services on resource installations in Area A of the Timor Gap (Zone of Cooperation), you could describe this as:

You are an entity providing services on plant and structures located outside Australia. An international tax agreement does not exist between Australia and the country in which the services are being provided.

Example 4 – dates

Where dates (exact dates in particular) pose privacy risks, sanitise these by using more general dates or legislated dates. You might use the following instead:

The contract was entered into during the relevant financial year.

The contract was entered into after 20 September 1985.<sup>6</sup>

The scheme commences in the year beginning 1 July 20xx.

There is no need to over-sanitise years in general. For the most part, simply indicating that a scheme existed in 2025, for example, will not pose a privacy risk.

Example 5 – relationships and associates, business activity

Where you are issuing advice to a taxpayer who runs a takeaway food outlet with his wife and their son and daughter, and their respective spouses, you could describe this as:

You and members of your family operate a small business.

Example 6 – description of work

A customs officer seeks a ruling about the deductibility of his legal costs associated with the successful defence of a criminal charge of receiving a bribe (in connection with the performance of his duties). The customs officer has left the

<sup>6</sup> 20 September 1985 is a legislated date that does not pose a privacy risk, refer to section 124-15 of the Income Tax Assessment Act 1997.

Australian Border Force and now works in another government department but the defence of the charge was necessary for his continued prospects of employment. You could describe this as:

You have expended legal costs associated with the successful defence of a serious criminal charge (in connection with the performance of your duties in order to preserve your continued prospects of employment). You have since left that place of employment and now work elsewhere.

Example 7 – monetary amounts

Monetary amounts can be replaced by general terms or mentioned with reference to legislated amounts. If this is not possible, approximations can be used. You might use the following:

You incurred net medical expenses in the relevant financial year above the relevant medical expenses threshold.

Example 8 – third party involved

A taxpayer invests in a public company which has merged with another public company. As a result, there are capital gains tax implications for all shareholders of that company. In this instance, the mention of the name of the company and the facts of the merger will not identify the taxpayer, nor will it reveal information about the third-party company which is not already in the public domain. Therefore, you may retain this information in the EV.

Example 9 – third party involved

A taxpayer invests in a financial product which has not been the subject of a product ruling and asks about the tax effectiveness of the product. The product has been marketed publicly, is widely available to a large population and is supported by the issue of a prospectus and advertising. The naming of the product, the product promoter or the features of the product do not identify the taxpayer or reveal information about the product that is not in the public domain. Therefore, you may retain this information in the EV.

Example 10 – third party involved

A taxpayer operates a small business and wishes to know the tax effect of transactions it has entered into with another small business. You must remove the name of both businesses from the EV. You may also need to generalise the nature of the transaction if it is peculiar to those businesses.

Example 11 – industry-specific terms or information

An oil company writes to the ATO requesting a private ruling on a transaction involving the purchase and installation of oil refining equipment used in a new refining technique. In this case, you must edit the EV sufficiently to prevent oil companies, the manufacturers of the oil refining equipment and potential investors (knowledgable persons) from ascertaining the identity of the taxpayer or third party involved in the transaction. You must also maintain the confidentiality of information relating to the new refining technique.

Example 12 – geographic location

Using the facts described in Example 11 of this Attachment, if the oil company proposes to enter a transaction involving the purchase of land on which to construct the new refinery, the significant community would include those residing or doing business in the vicinity of the land to be purchased. In this example, you must consider whether this broader community would be able to identify the taxpayer or third party involved in the transaction.

Example 13 – industry-specific terms or information

A taxpayer seeks a ruling in relation to certain international financing arrangements for the leasing of an Airbus A350 aircraft. You could describe this as:

You are seeking advice on the deductibility of interest incurred under a financing arrangement for leasing income-producing equipment.

If you described the arrangement in the former terms, others in the aviation industry would probably be able to identify the taxpayer, so the industry-specific term (Airbus A350) needs to be generalised using a term such as 'income-producing equipment'. The phrase 'international financing arrangements' further generalises the transaction. Note, however, that if the international nature of the financing was an important aspect of the arrangement, the reference may need to be maintained. You would need to exercise judgment.

Example 14 – third-party information

A taxpayer is a shareholder in a small private company and asks for advice on transactions they have had with that company. In this case, identifying the company could allow a knowledgeable person to identify the taxpayer and will also reveal information about the third-party company that is not in the public domain. You must remove the name of the third-party company from the EV. You may also need to generalise the nature of the transaction if it is specific to that company.

Example 15 – description of arrangements

Where you are issuing a private ruling to an employee gold miner seeking advice on the assessability of their salary in Papua New Guinea, you could describe this as

The international tax agreement between Australia and Country Z (Country Z Agreement) operates to avoid the double taxation of income received by residents of Australia and Country Z.
